The Department of Psychology at San Diego State University invites applications for a faculty position at the Assistant Professor rank. This is a full-time, nine-month, tenure-track position to begin August 2024. The successful candidate will establish and/or continue a productive program of research in industrial-organizational psychology. We are particularly interested in candidates whose central research program addresses workplace diversity, equity, and inclusion issues in organizations and uses sophisticated quantitative research methodologies and data analysis approaches (including, but not limited to, psychometric issues, multilevel modeling, and structural equation modeling). Example research programs include understanding diverse or intersectional identities at work (e.g., racial/ethnic identity, sexual orientation, gender identity, socio-economic status, ability/disability, aging), addressing bias and mistreatment issues (stereotyping, prejudice, discrimination, harassment, incivility), or building an inclusive and equitable workplace through policies and practices (e.g., recruitment, selection, training, leadership and team development, organizational development, program evaluation).

The Psychology Department has a research-oriented MS program in applied psychology with emphases in industrial/organizational and quantitative methodology. The highly selective, full-time MS program routinely has over 100 applicants with an incoming cohort between 4-7 students to support small graduate seminars and research mentoring in faculty laboratories. A master's thesis is required of all students in the MS program, and faculty are often provided course releases to support their research program. The Psychology Department also has a large and diverse population of undergraduate majors who are able to take up to three undergraduate classes in I-O psychology. I-O psychology is a popular specialty in the department, and undergraduate students are able to earn a certificate, declare a minor, or participate in an emphasis program in I-O psychology. Additional information about the MS program may be found at https://msappliedpsych.sdsu.edu/, and additional information about the Psychology Department can be found at http://www.psychology.sdsu.edu.

As part of its commitment to a safe and equitable “OneSDSU” community, SDSU requires that individuals seeking faculty employment provide at the time of application authorization to conduct background checks if they become a finalist for the position; applications without this authorization will be considered incomplete and not considered.

A background check (including a criminal records check) must be completed before any candidate can be offered a position with the CSU. Failure to satisfactorily complete the background check may affect the application status of applicants or continued employment of current CSU employees who apply for the position.

The person holding this position is considered a “mandated reporter” under the California Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting Act and is required to comply with the requirements set forth in CSU Executive Order 1083 as a condition of employment.
SDSU is a Title IX, equal opportunity employer and does not discriminate against persons on the basis of race, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity and expression, marital status, age, disability, pregnancy, medical condition, or covered veteran status.

The anticipated monthly salary for an assistant professor position is $5,405 - $11,994 for a full-time, academic year. This amount will vary according to candidate rank, experience, and market considerations specific to the scholarly discipline. Salary represents one component of a job offer that will also include a full benefits package, moving expenses, and start-up support.
